A city usually contains a cathedral. It is very busy and has lots of people. Each country has a capital city which is the main city. There are lots of shops and big buildings.

A town usually has a high street with the main shops on it. There are lots of houses, but it is not as busy as a city.

A village is much smaller than a town. It has a few local shops and less cars. There are houses but it is often surrounded by fields.

A farm is a large area of land used to keep lots of animals such as cows, sheep and horses. Farmers are normally found on farms working in the fields.

A factory has lots of people using machines to make products to sell. Usually food, toys, household items or clothes.

An office usually has lots of people working on the computer or using paperwork to help businesses. There are lots of offices in a city and some in a town. Offices are not usually found in a village.

A mountain is the tallest form of hill. Mountains are usually made of large amounts of rock and soil. A lot of mountains have snow on the top because they are so high up.

A valley is normally found at the bottom of a mountain. This is the area that collects water that rolls off the mountain. It is the opposite to a mountain.
